MORSE A WRECK WENT TO EUROPE TO SAVE MIND SAYS WIFE

Mrs. Morse Declares Husband Sailed at Her Solicitation Because She Feared a Complete Collapse—Lawyer Declares He Went for Rest—Fortune Swept Away, It Is Declared.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—That Charles W. Morse, the former ice king and head of the Shipping Trust, had sailed for Europe at the earnest request of his wife, who feared that the loss of his millions in the recent crash might unhinge her husband's mind, was the statement made by her in an interview this afternoon.

"Mr. Morse," she declared, "will return from Europe, and that very soon, to face whatever he may have to face. He did not go away to escape anything. He went at the imperative call of his shattered nerves.

"The worries of the last few months were such that he was in a fearfully nervous state. He had to get away. I begged him to go, and at last he decided that it was necessary for him to find absolute rest somewhere. That, under the circumstances, is only possible in Europe.

SEEKS REST IN EUROPE.

"Mr. Morse sailed last week. But I have forgotten the name of the steamer. I do not know where he has gone. I told him I did not want to know, so that I would not be able to tell anyone if I were asked. I did not want the rest that he must so much spoiled.

Who did I tell to go with him? Well, I must confess I am a terribly bad sailor. I dread an ocean voyage more than anything else in the world. I believe I would die if I had to take another. So I was decided that I was to remain behind."

Collapsed in Office.

It was current in Wall street this afternoon that Morse collapsed last Friday in the offices of Primrose & Brand, bank stock brokers, No. 42 Exchange place. This firm acted for Morse in regard to the bank stock he held in his various financial institutions and he was there, presumably, to dispose of some of his holdings.

It was said that Arthur Brand, a member of the firm, who has acted for Morse as his private secretary for some months, took him to the latter's offices in the Hotel Manx, broke down. He fell into a chair and was helped by two men to the elevator and thence to a cab in which he was driven to his home. It was that night, it is believed, that he and Mrs. Morse decided that he had better leave for Europe at once.

WALL STREET SKEPTICAL.

In the face of the emphatic denials of Mrs. Morse that Morse has "fled" the United States, Wall Street is estimating how much money the fallen financier has with him, where he disappeared, where he is most likely to turn up and what part of the world he will probably choose for his future home.

Albert Strassburger, Morse's counsel, declared today that his client went to Europe on the Campania on Saturday for a short trip to recover from the nervous strain of the recent crisis in the banking world.

"He cannot be denied his complaint that he has fled from his creditors," reiterated the lawyer.

MAY LIVE IN PARIS.

Morse's former associates put little attention to the statement that the one-time "ice king" has gone to Europe. They think he has gone to Paris to live. He is particularly fond of Paris, and has a magnificent residence there, and the popular conception is that he will become, practically, at least, a French citizen.

Concerning the amount of money he has been able to save from the wreck of his vast fortune there are many guesses. That he should have been gathering together the odds and ends of his stock of wealth is considered not unlikely.

Estimates of the value of this salvage are as high as $1,000,000. At all events, he has succeeded in his avowed aim to put him beyond the reach of want for the rest of his days.

WIFE MAY JOIN HIM.

Though Mrs. Morse, once Mrs. Charles F. Dodge, whose sensational experiences in the divorce courts filled columns of newspaper space a few years ago is still at the Fifth avenue mansion, it is believed she will join her husband in Europe in the near future.

Attorney Strassburger's statement that Morse called on the Campania was a surprise to officials of the Cunard company, who say they did not know he was among the passengers though they admit he may have slipped aboard at the last moment.

Mr. Morse's name was not on the passenger list given out at the office of the Cunard line on the day before the Campania sailed. The only name resembling that of the former ice king was C. M. Moore.

SAW HANDWRITING ON WALL?

It was believed today that Morse saw the handwriting on the wall three days ago. He had been before the grand jury. It is known that ugly of investigators took on gains to convict, when he had finished his three days' testimony, what their sentiments were and his words. And then being summoned before the grand jury was the signal for his creditors.

Simultaneously also in the form of actions began to move able to get from the streets of the Morse fortune what was left. Receivers and other creditors got after whatever they could get any value, belonging to Morse, was in the jurisdiction of the New York courts and did what they could to tie it up.

Some of the curious actions taken by the creditors of Morse of their affairs:

First Judgment in default for $155. 153.54 was obtained by Frederick Abt in the county clerk's office in favor of R. A. C. Smith & Co., a well-known stock and bond house for many years. Since then he has been a partner in the firm of Morse.

Second Suit was brought against him for $247,247.85 by Charles A. Eaton, United States Bank Receiver and receiver for the National Bank of North America. This amount represents the portion due upon heavy notes given the bank by Morse in September and October.

Third Attachment was filed in the county clerk's office against his residence, No. 720 Fifth avenue, which includes the Whitney mansion. This action was taken to safeguard the interests of the National

MAD MOTHER SLASHES BABES, TWO ARE DEAD

HORRIBLE TRAGEDY ENACTED AT HAVERHILL EARLY THIS MORNING.

HAVERHILL, Feb. 6. Mrs. Lizzie Stevens, thirty-five years of age, wife of George Stevens of No. 11 Charles street, this city, cut the throats of her two children, Mary, aged nine, and George, aged two, killing them.

Then the woman, who is undoubtedly demented, calmly prepared herself and walked to the home of her mother, Mrs. Susanna Murphy, in Salisbury, a suburb.

When she entered her mother's home, crying, walked all the way through the bleeding snowstorm, her clothing was found to be soaked. It was thought that the storm had drenched her, and her mother and sister began to take off her clothing to make her comfortable. Then they discovered that her garments were covered with blood.

"Where are the children?" gasped her sister Alice.

"I killed them," calmly said the woman.

Hastily locating a short circuit, Miss Alice Murphy dashed her across hall to the Stevens home. She broke through the door and found little Miss Lizzie lying on the bedroom floor. The only daughter, the baby boy, lay on the bed.

Police officers and inspectors were called.

"Did you kill your children?" they asked.

"Yes. It was better for them to die," said the mother.

"You are insane," they urged.

"All right. That may all be, would have died anyway. At the time I killed them I was insane. My mother and sister began to take off her clothing to make her comfortable. Then my one lucid interval came and I realized what I had done. I knew I must die, too, and I decided to do it in the bathtub. I was going to get in the tub with the children and drown us all. But I changed my mind and decided to cut our throats. I am glad I did. I am sane now and I am glad I killed them. They are better off dead."

Police Hunt Guilty in Case of Druggist SLAIN FOR REVENGE

Bushee Dies of Mysterious Assault in Store Made Nearly a Month Ago.

Charles F. Bushee druggist of Somerville, who died today, was murdered and the police of that city are doing everything in their power to find the dead man's slayer or slayers.

Mr. Bushee, who kept a drug store at No. 370 Somerville avenue, Somerville, was beaten into unconsciousness, his skull fractured and his body covered with bruises, on Sunday night, January 12.

He was taken to the Somerville city Hospital, where he died this morning without ever having been able to give a clear statement of how he was assaulted or who did the deed.

Revenge, retribution for some fancied wrong, is the theory Chief Parkhurst declares, for the crime.

Money Was Not Taken.

About two dollars and a half in coin and change were found on the floor when the druggist had been beaten down and some great fundoon in the tones of insensible and frantic struggle. Not a penny of his hard earned cash had been taken from his pockets.

Thirty eight dollars in bills in a pocketbook in the desk in the rear of the store were found by the police. The murderer carried away with him only what the man's life was the object of that fiendish.

Mr. Bushee died at 5 o'clock this morning in the Somerville hospital.

"A tall man, about six feet in height and weighing about 190 pounds," he whispered to his attendants and to his brother, Dr. Anderson Bushee of Malden once when he regained a glint of consciousness in the hospital, "assaulted me."

I was closing the store. He came into the store and asked for a cigar. I gave him one and then I felt a terrific blow on the head and I fell down behind the counter. I was not conscious of what the other man came in and assisted me at the time. I was unconscious for a long time, however. I don't know how long I was that way.

Lost His Senses.

When I came to, I crawled out and in the room behind the store and felt my senses again. The second time I came to I went out of the store and went around Somerville avenue to Mr. M. H. Lewis's house. I rang the bell and when he came to my room I told him I knew."

Chief Parkhurst of Somerville said last night that Mr. Bushee carefully questioned and cross questioned the man on all sides before he died in the hospital.

"I believe the murderer is still in Somerville," he said. "He is not leaving the city, for he knows that if he does he will be followed. When I say 'he' I mean the murderer or murderers, for I am inclined to think that there were more than one in the assault. I have a number of men working on the case and I believe I will be able to get the man who committed the crime before midnight."

Chief Parkhurst said last night that he had received conscientious assistance from the Boston police in the case.

Felled From Behind as He Was Closing Store, but Money Was Left.

It past, Willard C. Kingsley, No. 120, will attend the funeral.

We know nothing about the case," said Dr. Andrew, a brother of the murdered druggist, for a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter today. We know nothing. I talked with my brother at the hospital two hours after he received them. The only thing that I could get out of him was that he was struck by a man. He is a tall man, six feet in height, with a dark complexion.

"After that my brother relapsed into unconsciousness from which he was never able and I doubt if the police were able to get an intelligent story from him as he has been out of his mind nearly all the time since."

4,000 BOYS AND GIRLS WALK WITH WESTON IN DORCHESTER

Famous Pedestrian Declares Yesterday's Gathering in Many Respects the Greatest in His Career.

Edward Payson Weston, starting with the spring of youth, marched lustily into Codman Square, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, at the head of 4,000 men, boys and girls—mostly boys and girls, for school was just out—and to the salons and frazzoned faces men and women gathered in the square to receive him.

"In many respects," said the wonderfully preserved athlete, "the greatest gathering of my career."

Dorchester gave Weston the reception of a conquering hero. "Weston! Weston! Weston!" was the cheer cry of thousands, "three cheers for Weston!"

All the way up from Edward Everett square, down whose Columbia road he trudged, winning food out into Blue Hill avenue at the entrance to Franklin Park, giving forth a cordial word past Franklin Field, the sweet walk of the P. P. Weston Walking Club "cheered and cheered again." Now some spins came with re-enforcements, and every mile or so the ranks thickened more and more. At the close of the walk the number had increased to 2,000. Then it increased another 2,000 before the walk was ended in the Dorchester High School.

A speech of welcome on behalf of the educators was made by Superintendent of schools Stone, by Daniel T. O'Connell, who read a message from the mayor, and by Weston himself, explaining the important evil effects claimed by tobacco and liquor. Washington, and expressing his deep regret at his inability to be present. Weston's pleasure "how was to have received him, and the Walking Club's part in the event turned out to be a splendid success.

"If I could talk like Daniel O'Connell could of him," perhaps I should never have been a walker. The boxing man has a right to the name of O'Connell.

An Ideal Walking Day.

A great old gentleman, said O'Connell of the walker, "his step, his voice, his strength, should be a model for the youth of Dorchester."

It turned out to be an ideal day for walking. The cool snap had broken. At noon the mercury in official thermometers interested around the City Hall showed 38 degrees, mark. Weather forecasters spoke of approaching snow storms. The mercury probably jumped up as excitement as the heart of the small boy with a new sled.

"The best thing that has come out of the rising generation in years," was the way one of these forecasters put it to a walk correspondent. "Teach the boys to walk. Make alive! when I was a kid I thought nothing of walking a mile to the store. Now, you have to come across with the car fare of a Sunday morning before they'll go three blocks off to get the AMERICAN for you. Weston is the Man of the Hour for you. Weston is the Man of the Hour for you. Weston is the Man of the Hour for you.

As a matter of fact, he was the only grim-looking folk who were seen all along the line were positively identified as old pedestrians in the Boston Elevated Railway. Once Boston gets the Weston habit, something is bound to happen to you.

Long before 4 o'clock there were as many as 400 adults waiting for the arrival of Edward Everett square. Then the schools opened their doors, and—and—and—and thought of the "Pied Piper of Hamlin." You remember?

And all the little boys and girls,
With rosy cheeks and flaxen curls.

Yesterday, they were walking merrily after Weston.

Walking merrily after Weston, to be exact, after Stone's splendid band, of splendid pieces.

"The Girls are Walking."

What did they play?

Well, most of the pieces were selected out of compliment to the great old walking hero. As Weston put it, they "make the walk of Lorelei and Mr. Eldridge said, the other two old music folks I met when I walked to Washington were Sousa and from the Massachusetts State House."

There were some comic airs, of course, but mostly patriotic tunes, such as the airs with which Brook, Reed Rouse, The Marching Through Georgia and Marching Through Georgia, The Boys Are Marching, Trump, The Boys Are Marching, Trump, The Boys Are Marching, Trump

GUILD BLAMES DR. PAGE, WHO FREED MANIAC

"Criminally Negligent," He Calls Asylum's Chief, for Setting John A. Steele at Large.

AT ODDS WITH THE BOARD

The Governor today is inclined to acquit Dr. Charles W. Page, superintendent of the Danvers Insane Asylum, criminally negligent for the release on a writ of habeas corpus of John A. Steele of Everett, the maniac who went to the State House on Dec. 5 to "see the Governor and was shot and killed Edward Connell, a messenger previously wounded Dennis D. Driscoll of Boston, visitors to the executive chamber.

Governor Guild refused to act on the pearled today when the Governor's secretary, Frank J. Donahue, made public the correspondence which has passed between the Governor and Dr. Page and the Board of Insanity on the subject of Steele, the State authorities and Dr. Page.

The Governor and the State Board of Insanity are agreed as to the wisdom of the action of Dr. Page.

The State Board, composed of Dr. George F. Jelly, chairman; Dr. Herbert H. Howard, Dr. Walter B. Swift, Dr. Frederick P. Field and William J. Whittemore, holds Dr. Page entirely blameless.

Differ on Proposed Law.

It has been understood in the Legislature some weeks that the Governor and the Insanity Board are also at odds with regard to the Governor's proposal to amend the present statutes relative to the release from any person committed to the State Asylum for the Insane by the Governor upon the recommendation of two specialists appointed by the court committing the person. The object is to be the general sentiment in the Legislature that something should be done along the line suggested in the new law.

Governor Guild was up to noon today engaged on the pardon which he will grant to him on New Year's Day as a result of the Board of Insanity's action in the case of the release from Danvers.

The Board of Insanity in this communication gave the reasons for the opinion that the superintendent of the Insane Hospital would not have committed or forwarded the papers in the case of Steele in this report it was said:

The records of Westboro Hospital show assaults, patients and suicides by Steele, and the records of the institution. So far as this Board can learn there is no case of assault made by Steele upon any person outside of a hospital. Was the alleged shooting at a sentry while a member of the Massachusetts regiment stationed in Pennsylvania in the year 1898, which was given as an assignment to the Westborough Hospital. This assignment is also shown on the records and was known to Dr. Page.

Governor Guild continued: this first report Governor Guild says that the only "testimony to that effect is a maniac at large and no other information was had of the shooting and indulgent mother, whom the superintendent stated was the only person able to shield her son where she died Dr. Page that Steele had never attempted violence outside of his own family and that the doctor both being aware of homicidal attacks on outsiders in the past.

Defends Dr. Page from Blame.

Answering the Governor's criticisms, the State Board of Insanity finds the facts appeared to have been "misunderstood or allowed to be at large. What did Dr. Page know about Steele and what could he have known about him? The board finds that Dr. Page, possessed of full knowledge of Steele's attack upon another soldier in 1898, did not know all the facts connected with the shooting of Edward Connell. The Adjutant General's office, they point out, contributed little information which in itself character evident.

The board is not of the decided opinion that Mrs. Steele had no intention to go to Dr. Page, and that the statement of Dr. Page a grave injustice to conclude that he knew Mrs. Steele could not.

Your Excellency in concluding your letter states that you have been unable to have been criminally negligent. Choosing above to be a dangerous maniac who had on numerous occasions attempted to take human life and upon that information and suggest that Dr. Page should have called attention to the desirability of transferring Steele to the institution for the criminally insane at Bridgewater.

The board must express its profound regret if Your Excellency be of the opinion that a physician and expert of the experience and standing of Dr. Page could have relieved any patient knowing him to be the dangerous maniac who had on numerous occasions attempted to take human life.

B. & M. SEEKS COURT'S AID IN EXPRESS WAR

Asks Injunction Against Day Company and Manager McCarthy.

ALLEGE BROKEN CONTRACT

Alleging that the Day Express Company and its manager, Charles McCarthy, have violated their contracts to send express matter on the trains, the Boston & Maine Railroad today filed in Superior Court a petition for an injunction restraining the Day Express Company and Manager McCarthy from entering the freight sheds, platforms or upon the premises of the railroad and from interfering with the railroad business. This action follows the notice which has been signed between the railroad and the company, which was determined by the court. An order of notice returnable Friday morning was issued by the court on the petition for injunction.

McCarthy was expelled from a Boston & Main train at Wakefield on Saturday.

In the course of the petition the Boston & Maine alleges that agreements were made with the Day Express Company stipulating that all matter to be expressed should be weighed, tilled and prepaid by a ticketed messenger, and that the respondent has persistently violated this agreement, in spite of having received notification from the railroad that matters should conform with the agreement, the company would not be allowed to do business after January 31, when the notice says the petition, the respondent has continued to force matter upon the railroad in violation of all contracts.

The road asks that the express company be restrained from shipping any express matter, unless it be accompanied by a ticketed express messenger, properly equipped with tickets.

What would you do in this perplexing predicament? Take $1,500,000 in cash if you are pretty but poor, or take chances on getting perhaps $20,000,000 if the man who wanted to marry you was eighty-five and his family was dead set against you. See next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

HUBBARD DECLINES TO BE A RECEIVER

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. General T. H. Hubbard, who was appointed one of the receivers of the Consolidated Steamship Lines Company on Tuesday, declined to-day to accept the appointment. He gave as his reason that he had not the time to devote to the affairs of the company which the position would require.

KING MANUEL PUTS END TO DICTATORSHIP

The Courage of Queen Amelie Receives Unanimous Praise.

JAILED DEPUTIES SET FREE

LISBON, Feb. 6. It has been decided that the empire in the palace which had been established by the dictatorship of the brothers of King Carlos and Prince Luiz to be used for the purpose of a museum, is to be used for the purpose of a museum after a few minor services at the palace.

King Manuel's reactions to such important questions he still carries his arm in a sling.

Praise Queen Amelie

The papers here are unanimous in their praise of the courage and unwavering attitude of Queen Amelie since the assassination of her husband and son. She receives many appeals for decisions in political matters, and in regard to the arrangements for the funeral, all of which she meets with remarkable promptness and composure. When told by her physician that she should try and rest for several hours during the day, she replied:

"I have plenty of time to rest even time to-morrow."

It was announced to-day that members of the court and foreign diplomatic bodies will be received by the King in the palace and his son in the palace chapel, this afternoon.

The arbitrary decrees of ex-Premier Franco, which were issued in the name of King, who has announced that the court hereafter be governed by a constitutional government and not by a dictatorship.

Deputies Are Set Free.

The members of Parliament who were arrested by Franco's orders have been released, and their suspended privileges restored.

Senator Franco, from Galicia, Spain, who is has been taking refuge, made word that he is still confident of the ultimate success of his policies, and that he will take the opportune moment for his re-entry into political life.

"I'm no politician," said Admiral Amaral, the new premier, in an interview to-day. "I belong to no political group and have no government program. I am a plain sailor and accustomed to go where there is danger. If the peaceful cruise is ordered into danger it will go."

The King is young, but he has proved the best of dispositions, grand and noble virtues and profound patriotism. He will make an ideal monarch."

ALLOWS CHINESE JURY TO DISCUSS THE CASE

JUDGE GRANTS RIGHT TO REVIEW TESTIMONY WITHIN CERTAIN LIMITS.

At the assumption of the trial of the six Chinamen charged with the murder of four of their countrymen on the evening of Aug. 2, 1907, before Judge Pierce and Brown in the Superior Criminal Court to-day, there was a departure from the usual court procedure when Judge Pierce received a letter from the foreman of the jury asking for permission to discuss the evidence as presented, with certain restrictions.

The judge consulted counsel on both sides and then granted the request in the most liberal manner.

To the Honorable Judges Presiding in the Criminal Session:

The jury wishes to request that we may be allowed to discuss the evidence as presented in the case, within the limits as to the scope of this testimony.

Will Fix Facts in Mind

This, we believe, seems to us the most elementary way, and allows the jurors some it is very likely that some may be forgotten by part of the jury.

The jury wishes to come to an agreement after a few weeks is a important and much needed part, and it is well established the same testimony is to our knowledge, to review the testimony taking care to avoid all discussion as to Society.

UNITED FRUIT SHIP WRECKED, ALL ARE SAVED

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 6. The United Fruit Company's steamer Anselm has been wrecked on a reef near Porto Cortez.

No lives were lost. There were a number of New Orleans people on board. The cargo is a total loss.

What would you do in this perplexing predicament? Take $1,500,000 in cash if you are pretty but poor, or take chances on getting perhaps $20,000,000 if the man who wanted to marry you was eighty-five and his family was dead set against you. See next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

GRAHAM MUST PAY $25,000, DECIDES JURY

A verdict of $20,000.81, with interest amounting to $5,000 from February 1, has been returned by a jury in United States Circuit Court today against Gen. M. Graham, president of the International Trust Company, in the suit brought against Graham by the Pope Foundry & Kerr Coal Company of New York, for alleged false and fraudulent representations made by Graham regarding the financial condition of the Thomas & Pike Coal Company of New York, before the latter concern went into bankruptcy in May, 1903.

Connivance Is Alleged

By reason of these false representations it was claimed, the New York concern delayed in pressing a claim of $25,586.81 against the Thomas & Pike Company until the company went to the wall, whereas the International Trust Company, of which Graham was president and managing director, in the meantime, secured full payment of a debt of $68,500 from the company. Graham was alleged to have secretly connived to secure payment of his own company's debt, allowing the New York company to suffer.

The plaintiffs charged that, to induce the Pesie, Pomeck & Kerr Company to refrain from pressing its claim against the Thomas & Pike company, he represented to the New York concern that the latter company was thoroughly reliable and has good future business prospects. He declared, it was charged, that the Boston company was overstated in the matter of its indebtedness by means of false payments to its creditors. At that time, the plaintiffs charged, the Thomas & Pike company was insolvent and with practically no business prospects.

Makes General Denial.

The Thomas & Pike Company paid $15,000 on its indebtedness, leaving a balance unpaid of about $20,500. Graham, in his answer, made a general denial of all the allegations, declaring that he had believed the Thomas & Pike Company to be an honest and solvent concern and that it was forced into bankruptcy through an unexpected decline in the market price of coal and through the poor quality of stock it had on hand.

Graham declared that all the payments made by the Thomas & Peck Company to the International Trust Company had been made voluntarily and that partial payments had also been made by the concern to other creditors.

DIPLOMAT WINS MRS. WALKER

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Weightman Walker, of Philadelphia and New York, the woman who came into $80,000,000 at the death of her husband, the wealthy chemist, was reported to-day to be engaged to be married to Frederic Courtland Penfield, of the New York society man, diplomat and scholar.

Mr. Penfield comes of New England stock. He was at one time in the United States consular service, having been Vice-Consul at London, Consul-General at Cairo, with the rank of Minister Resident, and he was one of the commissioners who negotiated the sale of the French rights in the Panama Canal to the United States Government.

BOY BRINGS $5,000 SUIT FOR DOG BITE

Alfred Cutler, a Somerville boy, filed suit for $5,000 damages against Bridget Barry in Middlesex Superior Court at East Cambridge to-day for a bite alleged to have been inflicted by a dog belonging to the defendant. Alfred's father, Jeremiah Cutler, sues for $5[illegible] nursing.

A Curb Mix-Up

Somebody got mixed up on the Curb, yesterday—or else the Curb itself did.

There was some Bingham Central Standard stock bought and sold, but how much and at what price the experts who figure out what really happens and what sometimes says bargains on the Curb have yet to determine.

One financial newspaper says there were 1200 shares of Bingham Central Standard sold at 50, and 1500 shares of Bingham Standard Copper sold at 52 to 55.

This is highly interesting, if true because it demonstrates the truth of a mathematical proposition I had never really believed, namely: That one-half is greater than the whole.

The Bingham Central Standard Company is a holding company, holding a majority of the stock of the Bingham Standard Copper Company and the Bingham Central Mining Company.

Stock of the Bingham Standard is convertible for stock of the Bingham Central Standard to a ratio of two for one. In other words, one share of Bingham Standard stock is worth just one-half a share of Bingham Central Standard.

Now, according to the paper I have quoted, Bingham Standard sold at from 52 to 55 and Bingham Central Standard sold at 50.

This proves, as I say, that one-half is worth quite a little more than the whole—if you believe it.

Another financial paper says there were 5250 shares of Bingham Standard sold, at from 52 to 55. It doesn't mention the Bingham Central Standard. If that paper is correct, stock of the Bingham Central Standard Company—each share of which is worth two shares of Bingham Standard—sold on the Curb yesterday at from $1.04 to $1.30 a share.

Here arise some interesting questions:

1. What was sold?
2. What price did it bring?
3. Did anybody who bought know what he was buying?
4. When those who bought get their certificates will they find they have got the company in operating company stock?

Very interesting, all these questions. As a matter of curiosity I would like to know the answer, but life is too short and business too rushing to devote the necessary time to trying to untangle the tangles of the Boston Curb.

I should say, offhand, that it looks as if the Curb was beginning to find itself on this question of the value of Bingham Central Standard stock.

It is possible that reputable stock exchange houses selling the stock are now asking for unusual time conditions as to delivery. It is also noticeable that when a broker bids for Bingham Central Standard he may get Bingham Central Standard offered him in return—and he may get something else.

Lest there might be, out of all this confusion and mathematical paradox, some misunderstanding, let me say clearly:

The stock which I have advised and am advising investors to buy on the Curb is the stock of the Bingham Central Standard Company—the holding company. Each share of this stock is equal to two shares of the Bingham Standard, a point fairly worth remembering if you are buying.

Samuel Newhouse is vice-president of the Bingham Central Standard Company. D. C. Jackling is vice-president and general manager. These two men have records of success in the mining world achieved by no other two men on my knowledge. I believe they will make of the Bingham Central Standard Company that same success which they have made of other properties with which they have been and are now identified.

Make no mistake. I am advising the purchase of stock in the Bingham Central Standard Company, the par value of which is $5 per share, the president of which is Samuel Newhouse and the vice-president and general manager of which is D. C. Jackling. The State Street Trust Company of Boston is registrar for this stock and the Federal Trust Company of Boston is transfer agent.

At any price under $1.50 per share the stock represents an exceptional investment or speculative profit. I believe it will sell at $2 per share within thirty days.

A few days more and a great white light will appear on the curb. Then another mix-up like yesterday will not be possible.

If you can buy Bingham Central Standard stock on the curb at any price under $1.50 a share my advice is to make haste and buy it. When quotations reach $1.50 I shall offer 50,000 shares of treasury stock at that price. I shall not sell any of this treasure stock at a less figure. I expect to sell it all at that price within two weeks.

I shall be glad to buy this stock on the curb at the lowest possible price for any one desiring me to serve them in the matter. It is possible that a few thousand shares may be had under $1.50 per share. I do not believe, however, that 200 actual shares of Bingham Central Standard stock were sold yesterday on the Boston Curb. However, those who act quickly in the matter may be able to get some of the stock very cheap. But it is going up. Make no mistake about that. And it is going up fast, because—

In my opinion it is now worth more than $2 per share. In the meantime, it is interesting to watch and study the Curb reports, according to which one share of stock is worth more than two shares of the same stock.

In acting on the advice which I am here giving, make your instructions explicit. Order Bingham Central Standard and insist on regular delivery within the usual time. Accept no unusual conditions.

As stated above, I shall be glad to act for any investor or speculator desiring to buy this stock.

Address all communications to me personally and make all checks payable to my order.

THAW GETS UP BALL TEAM AT MATTEAWAN

White's Slayer Now Becoming Reconciled to Conditions at Asylum.

ALLOWED ONE CIGAR A DAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. Unless the State Board of Lunacy constantly reminds Harry Thaw from the same asylum for criminally insane at Matteawan to some private institution, upon the appeal made by President Travis by Evelyn Thaw, the millionaire will be allowed to remain in his present quarters until the return of Lawyer Martin W. Littleton from his vacation in the South, about April 1.

After Littleton had left the city, Thaw's mother, accompanied by a detail of police, called on Lawyer Littleton and, it is said, was prepared to make application for a writ of habeas corpus on which to bring Thaw's transfer.

Thaw has become more reconciled to his position. He has organized a baseball club among the younger men of the ward, and interests will be played every day if the weather permits. He has also been allowed a cigar a day, and the ration is a liberal one. He is also allowed to smoke his cigar at any time in the asylum grounds, more desirable.

Attorneys to-day said positively, notwithstanding Thaw's statement, that they would not be on hand when the writ is returned. They declared that they were acting only as counsel, and that the press, that he has no power whatever to transfer Thaw from Matteawan.

BIG SALE AT O'CALLAGHAN'S

Crowded for floor space as extensive improvements on the site of the old Bijou Theatre, the O'Callaghan suit and cloak store, No. 543 Washington street, offers almost unheard-of bargains in women's garments.

Extensive alterations are being made," said J. J. O'Callaghan, "Workmen have been here for more than week and the improvements and renovations under way are such as to necessitate that about half of the O'Callaghan store space had to be given up. As a result we have decided to close out this week every article of selling suits to make room. Others will take their stock, even at forced sale. This week and next will be the greatest opportunity most girls and women have had for years to buy suits and cloaks. The two months mark during which everything must be disposed of. Furs, skirts, waists and wearables of all kinds for women, misses and children.

BRITISH WARSHIPS RUSHED TO PACIFIC

REGARDED AS WARNING TO AMERICA THAT JAPAN TREATY WILL BE UPHELD.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The Admiralty has within two days sent the whole of the famous fleet squadron of eleven warships to the Pacific.

This unexpected and astounding move on the part of the British Government, coming at a time when relations between Japan and the United States are strained, although in the event that the United States and Japan should go to war.

The other factors which, during recent months, have caused the United States to regard with grave concern the rapid expansion of the British Empire in the Pacific, are also regarded as relevant to the present situation.

The order was given suddenly and without previous warning, and the fact that Admiral Evan's squadron is now in Japanese waters, and that the dispatch of the additional American warships now contemplated would be to the United States indisputed mastery of the Pacific, is declared that the sudden intention to dispatch the British squadron would strike a sudden.

Refuse to Explain.

The British squadron is dispatched to Esquimalt, the naval base of Great Britain on the Pacific coast, is regarded with considerable attention in view of the fact that Admiral Evan's remarks in a speech at Yokohama, after the visit of that the dispatch of additional American warships now contemplated would be to the United States undisputed mastery of the Pacific.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Just Nothing to Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize in what manner it goes into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better, it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels, it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All of charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use but, on the contrary great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to those contemplating and purify the breath, mouth and throat. I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them, they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some cases a natural preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Charles W. Morse, His Daughter and Two Sons, and Abe Hummel Jailed for Famous Morse-Dodge Plot

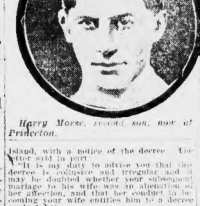
MORSE CENTRE OF AMAZING DIVORCE PLOT

tim in Strange Cabal That 38. Landed Abe Hummel in Blackwell's Island.



Harry Morse, second son, now at Princeton.

Abe Hummel, stood pat against spiriting against Morse.

The love of Charles W. Morse for pretty Clemence Cowles Dodge, their romantic marriage and honeymoon in the former financier's yacht, following the divorcing of Dodge by his wife, the annulment proceedings forced by Dodge, the confession by the latter that he had conspired with Attorney Abe Hummel, who is now a prisoner in Blackwell's Island, and the wide shattering of all the glittering financial schemes and combinations of Morse, is a story in real life which for surpasses fiction.

CHAPTER I.

MISS COWLES MARRIES DODGE.

Charles F. Dodge, in 1877, was in the restaurant business in San Francisco. Clemence Cowles, a beautiful young girl, born in the South, was living there with her sister, Mrs. J. N. Lone. Dodge and Miss Cowles met and were married in March, 1877.

For ten years they lived together, but were happily. There were many differences, and when they came to New York they finally separated.

Dodge was employed in various hotels in and about New York and Long Island as steward, manager, and in some cases was proprietor. Mrs. Dodge kept a boarding house in West Forty-fourth street for a time.

In 1895 Dodge went to Atlanta. He heard from his wife occasionally, but their marital relations were never resumed. In 1897 he entered the dining car service of a Southern railroad, making his headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

CHAPTER II.

SHE DIVORCES DODGE.

It was in the latter part of 1897 that a lawyer in Atlanta went to him with a proposition to furnish his wife with evidence which she could use in a suit for divorce.

Dodge says he furnished the evidence on the agreement that she was not to ask for alimony.

In 1898 Mrs. Dodge sued for and secured a decree of divorce. It was alleged that Dodge had been personally served with the papers in the case. He made no defense.

CHAPTER III.

SHE MARRIES MORSE.

In 1901 Wall street and the financial world in this city were startled by the information that Charles W. Morse, who had been prominent in financial circles here during the latter Mayor Low's administration, was to marry Mrs. Clemence Cowles Dodge. The marriage was celebrated May 1 and Mrs. Morse went to Europe on her honeymoon trip.

In 1902 Mr. Morse received a letter from lawyer Abraham Hummel, in which the latter informed Morse that Charles F. Dodge had obtained a decree of divorce from his wife by default, she not having entered her appearance in the case. Dodge alleged irregular acts on the part of the petitioner was when he was served at the Long Beach Hotel, Long Island, with a notice of the decree. The latter said in part:

"It is my duty to advise you that the decree is collusive and irregular and it may be doubted whether your subsequent marriage to his wife was an alienation of her affection, and that her conduct in becoming your wife entitles him to a decree against her.

"I have taken the liberty of thoroughly informing you regarding this matter. So if you desire you may at once confer with your counsel before any legal steps are taken."

CHAPTER IV.

HER DIVORCE ANNULLED.

The case went to court and the divorce of Mrs. Dodge was annulled, which left her again the lawful wife of Charles F. Dodge.

Mr. Morse fought the case and helped Mrs. Dodge in her fight, and the case was finally taken to court, when the annulment of the divorce was annulled, leaving her again, apparently, the wife of Mr. Morse. But for some reason the decree was never entered.

About this time there began to be rumors of a conspiracy. Against whom or for what purpose could not be shown. At any rate, it was decided that Dodge had lied in some of the proceedings and an action against him for perjury was started.

CHAPTER V.

SHE GOES TO EUROPE.

Dodge disappeared. Mrs. Dodge, or Mrs. Morse, went to Europe.

Dodge was arrested as he left the train from New Orleans in Texas. It was said he was trying to get into Mexico.

Hummel-Hatch lawyers of New York became interested in him.

Application for his extradition was made to the Governor of Texas, and the New York lawyers fought the case for Dodge. Why his return was once stayed by the chief of guesswork Money was sent by the thousands to keep him in Texas. It was feared that on his return he would make a confession that would involve the wealth, fortunes and future of a certain ring of men, who would take utmost step chained to prevent such an occurrence.

CHAPTER VI.

DODGE CONFESSES.

The case in Texas dragged along for months. The United States County finally decided that Dodge should come back to New York.

Dodge was brought back. In the District Attorney's office, and later in court, he confessed that the whole thing was a conspiracy to arrest money from Morse. He declared that Abe Hummel had paid him $2,000 to swear falsely, that he had not been served with the papers in his wife's divorce suit.

CHAPTER VII.

HUMMEL IN PRISON.

Convicted of conspiracy, Hummel, born in Boston fifty-seven years ago, was sent to Blackwell's Island on May 17 last. Broken down physically and mentally by reason of his disgrace and the rigors of his confinement as a convict, he will know New York hereafter in the shadow of his former self. He has nothing to look forward to.

Freedom will never for him mean disgrace. Serving out during his confinement the title he has been required of Hummel No. 925, and number 925, Hummel looks, he will remain the balance of his life.

CHAPTER VIII.

MORSE IS IN EXILE.

Morse had no fling. With Hummel in prison and Dodge's self-confessed perjurer his record, Morse's financial friends and his wife was more beyond doubt. With Mrs. Morse in exile in this country, Morse plunged into the shipbuilding trade and then to mining trust.

The Morse interests failed again and Morse is now broke. His Fifth avenue home has been sold and the title which can be found in the hands of the law for the creditors of C. W. Morse, the day the sheriff's auction. The cunning has vanished and the once proud Morse has been piled up too high for him and he is now a fugitive from justice who are seeking him high and low. And the wife for whom he sacrificed his whole career is in exile in the palatial Fifth avenue mansion.

MORSE'S SON HERE DENIES FATHER GONE

Bank of North America in the $243,321.25 suit. Attachments were also served on a number of banks and bankers with whom Morse is supposed to have money.

Fourth—Several blocks of bank stock, the identity of which could not be learned, gone to the wall and were owned by Mr. Morse, were sold at auction in the New York Real Estate Exchange by Adrian H. Muller, auctioneer. The bank stock sold was supposedly put up by Morse to secure loans which have matured, and was sold on the account of others than Morse, presumably for the institutions which loaned the money.

When the closing house in October last drove Morse out of the chairmanship of the National Bank of North America and the presidency of the National Bank, and out of the directorates of half a dozen other banks and trust companies, it was soon rumored that the so-called Morse crowd had been completely wiped out and relegated to oblivion.

Since then his $120,000,000 Consolidated Steamship Company, which owned, with the exception of the old Dominion Steam Ship Company, all important American steamship line on the Atlantic seaboard, has been disintegrated. Receivers have been appointed for a number of the subsidiary companies of the Consolidated.

Interest on the $600,000 of 4 per cent. bonds of the Consolidated Steamship Company was defaulted on January 1 last, and although a 90 days' grace was given, they sold at 9 yesterday. The stock of the company is practically unsalable.

The bid price yesterday was 25 cents a share, the asking price 37½ cents. At yesterday's bid price the $60,000,000 of stock had a market value of $150,000. This means that an actual stock capital of the $120,000,000 company could be bought for $75,000.

Since the campaign against Morse was started his line of Hudson River steamboats has been involved in litigation and the stock has depreciated.

The stock of every bank and trust company in which he was interested has shared the high price of $23 a share. Many depreciated tremendously. The item in the basket of unlisted securities which he held for sale was Bank stock, which has sold at 10, it is believed.

The Morse interests had held control of the Mercantile National Bank, the Fourth National Bank, the United States Trust Company, the Asiatic Bank and the Metropolitan Bank. Morse and his friends are believed to have sold out their holdings in all of these banks.

Morse, Mr. Hanna attempted to keep the details of the arrest of the man of whom he was so fond from the public. He could reach him at no greater than his friend it proved difficult.

SAILS FOR EUROPE.

Last Tuesday night Mr. Hanna was informed that earlier in the day Morse had left the city and had probably sailed for Europe.

Mr. Hanna could be confirmed yesterday the fact of Morse's departure and hinted that the former financier had left the country on the packet line ranks. Morse home on Fifth avenue the man who came to the door said in answer to questions:

"I don't know whether Mr. Morse is in or not or whether he has gone away. I haven't seen him. I'm a friend of Mr. Morse's, though, friends could not be found. His office is at No. 40 West Fifty-seventh street around the corner from Morse's residence. I suggest you go there."

Ex-Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck, whose office is on Lenox on Avenue near the Morse home, also could not be found.

"FATHER'S IN NEW YORK. NOT BROKE," SAYS MORSE'S SON

Declaring that it is foolishness that there is no truth in the whole story that his father has not gone away but is in New York, Benjamin Wyman Morse, son of Charles W. Morse, a student in Harvard, made positively denial yesterday that his father had left the country. Young Morse, who is a member of the Harvard freshman class, was seen by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter in his room in Holworthy hall, Harvard college, and asked to make a statement concerning the reports that his father had left the country. Young Morse, after reading the article, said:

"There is absolutely no truth in the report that my father has left New York for Europe or for foolishness. There is no foundation to the whole story. I heard from my father but last night and I know that he is in New York.

"My father is peculiar in that he travels a good deal because of his business interests and he does not always inform us when he is going to take a trip.

"I would also be glad to tell my father he's gone to Asia, as was stated in some of the newspapers, but there is absolutely no truth in the whole story."

And young Mr. Morse displayed no little advoyance, thinking as though it were a joke.

MORSE SEEN NEAR HOTEL TOURAINE, SAYS BOSTON MAN

According to a Boston police official Charles W. Morse, the missing financier, was seen in Boston near the Hotel Touraine shortly before noon today by a man who knows the missing man and has known him for years. In a statement made today by Morse's son at Harvard the boy declared that he knew where his father was because he had talked with him last night.

SILVER GIFT FOR OSGOOD

There was a mammoth floral piece representing the city hall, and painted as a surprise for Mayor George A. Hibbard, a beautiful scene for the stage for the intricate pressions, Charles E. Osgood, a profusion of floral decorations and an abundance of good cheer and witty speeches at the second annual banquet in Young's Hotel last night of the Home Furnishers Association of Massachusetts. Covers were laid for 175 and everything was done by far the most pretentious in the history of the association.

Mayor Hibbard was re-elected by his private secretary, Jerome Jones, who responded to the Mayor's toast and acted as toastmaster during the banquet, and remained to Boston. Henry L. Kinsman was toastmaster.

Besides the Mayor's serious speeches were made by the retiring president, Mr. Osgood, who also presented the souvenir spoons to the guests, and read the telegrams from Speaker John N. Cole, William A. Morse, governor-elect; Lieut.-Gov.-elect Barker E. Bell, Edward S. Parsons, president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association of the United States; Charles Pratt of the New York Association, and the new president, James Osgood of Somerville.

The following officers were elected: President, James Osgood, Somerville; first vice-president, Edward A. Atkinson, Boston; second vice-president, Henry E. Kinsley, Quincy; third vice-president, W. E. McArthur, Boston; fourth vice-president, F. P. Lace, Boston; secretary, Amasa E. Cour, Boston; treasurer, H. F. Nodell, Boston; executive committee: H. F. Osgood, Richard L. Wilson of Boston and E. Marshall of Haverhill.

Mr. Caldwell, the new president, is connected in many of the leading powers, is connected with the commissary department of the State Militia.

RIKER MANAGER FEATURE AT BANK MEN'S BANQUET

Banking Remarks" by Jerome A. Riker, advertising manager of the Riker-Hegeman Company of New York, and a former resident of Boston, enlivened the 30th annual banquet of the Banking Association of Bank Cashiers at the Boston Athletic Association, and proved the feature of the gathering. Mr. Riker kept the audience laughing from the time he started to talk.

"I am one who knows only one subject to perfection," he said, "and that is myself. I'm going to tell you a few things about myself, with a collection of cuts of myself, in myself and myself. Then there are some of my friends.

"We men think pretty well of ourselves, and we have a right to. We are the real backbone of the country. We are the ones who do the work and the fighting. We are the ones who make the money. We are the ones who support the women and children. We are the ones who do the voting. We are the ones who do the paying of taxes. We are the ones who do the paying of taxes. WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

"BE HONEST," JOHN L. SAYS TO YOUNG BOXERS

Many aspiring young lads in the Hub have appealed to John L. Sullivan for advice and he always hands out the same.

Boxing, as well as any other sport, is honest under a code that applies to one and all alike. There is nothing to be gained by trying to put over a fake, for it is bound to be found out sooner or later.

You must have courage. Don't dicker with your prospective opponents as though you were a merchant driving a hard bargain. Keep in your class and fight only those in your class. Then the public will know that you are not yellow and if you are not yellow you need not be afraid that you will stay in the game long. If you will stage your bouts and fight with honesty. Look ahead for better fields rather than to the dollars you receive. If you are a good boxer, or a gentleman, the dollars will take care of themselves good natured.

THE BOSTON AMERICA

Only Ten Original Players in the American League.

FEW VETERANS LEFT

Only ten players have gone through eight American League seasons. Each one of the ten, with one or two exceptions, is good for several seasons yet, so this list will not be changed much within the next few years. Of course, there are a number of players now in the league who have seen more than eight years of big league service, but when the American League was organized, they were in the National league and did not come over when the Ban Johnson circuit quit a year or two later. In the list might be mentioned Jimmy Collins, Boston, Kerwer, Bernhard, Flick, Bradley, Jimmy Collins, Sam Crawford, Hunter Jones, George Davis and Bobby Wallace.

Connie Mack has four of the men who aided in the development of the American league, starting out in 1901 and going through the hard war of 1902 and 1903. They are Outfielders "Topsy Hartsel and "Socks" Seybold, Baseman Harry Davis and Catcher Schreck. Hartsel and Seybold were members of the Baltimore team in 1900 while Davis was playing with the Milwaukee club. Schreck was then with Buffalo and also played with Boston and Cleveland prior to becoming one of the Athletics.

Patterson Boy Wonder In 1900.

Roy Patterson of the White Sox was the "boy wonder" in 1900 and led Frank Isbell for a team mate. Washington also had two men last year who were original with American league ball, the person of John Anderson and Cuba Patterson, who started out at Milwaukee and afterward played with St. Louis and New York and on the Nap roster.

BALL PLAYERS USUALLY DO THE UNEXPECTED

Have you ever noticed that the players who showed up to advantage in the different world's series are just the fellows of whom little or nothing is expected?

In the series between New York and the Athletics there wasn't a critic who considered for a minute that second baseman "Billy" Gilbert of the Giants would be a factor in determining the winner. No one picked George Rohe as the one best bet to do the White Sox hitting opportunities. In fact, very few fans or critics thought for a minute Rossman would play. Yet Rossman was regarded as the foolish slater of the tiger aggregation, a player who would blow up under the strain, and it was generally accepted that the Tigers didn't have a chance first socker.

Gilbert, Rohe and Rossman were looked on as also rans who were just a little out of their class with the three players took a prominent part in the shooting made by their team. The work of Gilbert and Rohe aided largely in the victories scored by the New York Giants and Chicago Sox. Rossman played the best game for the Tigers by far, even if the Detroit team went for naught, as the Detroit team failed to win a game.

"Billy" Gilbert was regarded as a feeble slater at the plate, yet in the series with Detroit decided the series.

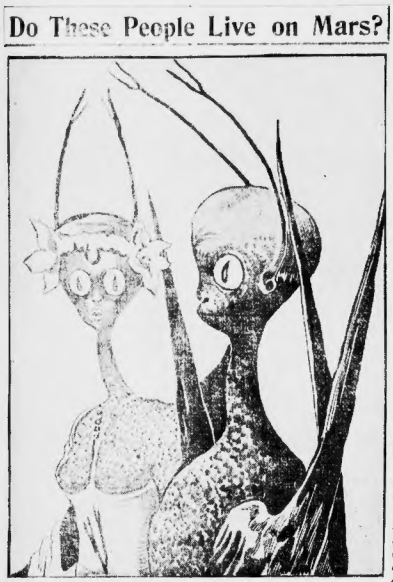
Do These People Live on Mars?



H. G. Wells, the Great English Writer, Says That They Do

(Reprinted from this month's Cosmopolitan Magazine.)

These Are Very Queer Monsters. True

No Queerer Than a Cow, or an Elephant, OR YOURSELF

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal Examiner

What kind of creatures live on the planet Mars? Are they round, with four legs and four arms, like those imagined by Plato? Have they faces partly brass-colored, and the other queer characteristics of the folk imagined by Swedenborg as dwellers on the moon?

H. G. Wells, the great imaginative writer and sociologist, has tried to master the problem. Here you look at a picture of creatures that HE says are A MAN AND A WOMAN of Mars.

The picture is reproduced from the mid-Winter number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, just issued.

Mr. Wells imagines his Martians covered with feathers or fur, and says: "It is no less reasonable to suppose, instead of a hand, a group of tentacles or proboscis-like organs."

He imagines Martians whirling about on a single wheel, balanced by a gyroscope.

A few months ago we should have laughed at the idea of Mars folk using the gyroscope to balance them on their travels on one wheel. But since then WE HAVE LEARNED THAT THE GYROSCOPE CAN BALANCE A RAILROAD TRAIN ON ONE WHEEL, OR DO AWAY WITH THE SHIVVING SENSATIONS ON AN OCEAN STEAMER, OR STEADY AN AEROPLANE IN ITS FLIGHT. WE DON'T LAUGH AS MUCH AT THE GYROSCOPE NOW AS WE SHOULD HAVE DONE SOME TIME AGO.

Those who choose will read in the Cosmopolitan the details of Mars's dwellers as Wells has imagined them, or the very scientific and exact article in the same magazine by Professor David Todd, leader of the party in the recent intense and extensive observations of Mars.

What we call your attention to here is this fact:

Whatever we have SEEN, we take for granted. It is difficult for us to imagine anything we have NOT seen. And whatever is different from the usual we look upon as ridiculous.

We are entirely used to a cow. Therefore cows on Mars wouldn't surprise us. But suppose we had NEVER seen a cow, and suppose Mr. Wells showed us in his imaginary collection of Martian animals a large, fierce looking brute, with sharp horns at one end and a milk bag at the other, with a long tail to switch flies, and the habit of saying "Moo" and chewing a cud. We should think he was crazy.

If we had never seen an elephant, huge, ungainly, with head high up in the air, and a nose conveniently reaching to the ground, we should declare the man imagining such a creature almost fit for the insane asylum.

We find it hard to believe in animals different from the animals we have seen. We find it hard to imagine thinking, intelligent creatures different from ourselves. Even Mr. Wells, with his marvellous imagination and his very earnest desire to combine imagination with reasonable probability, is unable to get far away from the human shape in his Mars men. They have hands that run off into grape vines, still they are HANDS. They have big eyes, but the usual TWO, in the usual place.

Nose, mouth, shoulders, neck—all are about the same. He puts on wings, which he borrows from the birds—something that he has SEEN.

Our minds are limited, and most wisely. If we could imagine the unseen, if we could imagine things outside of our own little surroundings, we should be wasting our lives and minds on the unreal. We are put to do our work here ON THE EARTH. AND DIVINE WISDOM LIMITS OUR MENTAL ACTIVITIES TO THINGS ACTUALLY HERE. Even when we imagine conditions in Heaven we simply duplicate earthly conditions, putting in gold instead of bricks, and pearls instead of stones.

Even the great Creator of the universe we are obliged to imagine as a man-shaped thing, a biped built something like ourselves, and wearing a gray beard. Poor, feeble, human intellects!

We have MEN'S work to do, dealing with MEN, dealing with the animals here. WE CAN'T IMAGINE ANYTHING ELSE, AND IT IS JUST AS WELL THAT WE CANNOT.

Mr. Wells's speculations in the Cosmopolitan will INTEREST you, and Professor Todd's actual photographs of Mars will instruct you. It is fascinating to deal with men in far-off space, but our principal work for a long time will remain as it is to-day, dealing with two-legged men here on earth, struggling with earth conditions, leaving Mars to its canals and its troubles, the Martians.

Some day we shall study our planetary neighbors in space. Very likely we shall talk to them, using as telegraph signals the varying length in the waves of light. But that is far off. We are to remain EARTHLY, and earthly only, until much work still undone shall be accomplished.

When Sorrow Came

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

WHEN first dark Sorrow entered at my gate
With mournful mien and melancholy eyes,
I met her with a distant, cold surprise.
"Good Dame," quoth I, as one in high estate
Addresses menials, "Go hence, and wait;
For all my time is spoken otherwise."
But Sorrow sat her down, and would not rise
An unasked guest intruding on Life's feast.
Gay Joy and Pleasure, whom I entertained,
Sped down youth's corridors and passed from sight;
And laughing Mirth paused in the dance and fled.
Then wroth, I cried: "See how my friends are pained,
Woman, why came you here, and by what right?"
But Sorrow paid no heed to aught I said

THE guests departed; so two sat alone
I gazed upon her; regal was her mien.
Her eyes held depths unfathomed and serene.
And there was silent music in her tone.
Rebellious heart, kneel down," she cried, "and own
Allegiance for all time to me, your guide."
And as I knelt, God's smile flashed in between,
And on my soul fell peace I had not known.
Then at my board I placed her to command
My willing service, and her mournful face
Grew radiant as she answered with delight.
"Nay, I will go, since now you understand,
Who entertains dark Sorrow with such grace
Shall walk with Joy upon the mountain height."

The Supreme Court Should Be Changed

By E. Gerry Brown

THE men of action in organized labor should take notice that twenty years' work leaves us with very little legislation to show for it. Such is the test of the Supreme Court of the United States. Nearly all of the results of the efforts during that time have been swept away in the past few months.

The eight-hour day on government work—unconstitutional; employers' liability bill—unconstitutional; discrimination against unions by railroad corporations to be illegal—unconstitutional.

After the Dred Scott decision was rendered Abraham Lincoln called it "resistance to the decision." In a speech at Chicago, Ill., July 10, 1858, he explained how "resistance" was to be made effective. The basis is on that labor men may well commit to memory if they intend to register any effective protest.

Lincoln said: "It will be so decided again unless the court reverses its decision. Well, we mean to do what we can to have the court decide the other way. That is one thing that we mean to do."

Let it be remembered that they organized and did it.

In his inaugural, March 4, 1861, Lincoln said: "At the same time the candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the government upon vital questions affecting the whole people is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court . . . the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their government into the hands of that eminent tribunal."

Shrewd as they are, those few great common people, the wealth producers, whether inside or outside of labor unions and farmers' organizations, to recognize the fact that government is in the hands of the so-called "vested rights" of wealth distributors, more insolent than the slave holders of fifty years ago, and more remorseless in their absorption of the wealth which others create.

This powerful combine controls Congress, it appoints judges of the Supreme Court, and thus the constitution is interpreted in their interests because they are organized, and the decisions are against the common welfare for which the government was created because the people are not well organized.

What is the cause of the degeneration in public spirit?

Dating from the civil war the whole tendency of our institutions has been toward the development of commercialism. Graduates in the professions seek the most remunerative employment and find it within the gift of the same men who practically confiscate the larger share of the annual wealth production of the country as their tariff for distribution.

Courts and lawyers can define the rights of property with hair-splitting decisions, but the doctrine of the Rights of Man has been relegated to the days when the Declaration of Independence inflamed the hearts of men and when it was said that the "voice of the people is the voice of God."

It is not a legal question; it is more than that—it is a moral question.

Those wealth absorbers have the legal right to absorb the wealth of the many because they made the laws with that end in view; and did the slave holders when they took part in making the Constitution and using their power to appoint judges of the Supreme Court and obtain decisions favorable to the labor they held in bondage.

Wherein is the difference between the "irrepressible conflict" of slavery days and now?

Until the conscience of the people recognizes the evils that are thus engendered, and a great moral sentiment is thus awakened to effect a change, there can be no progress towards a government that was the ideal of its founders.

He Tries to Apply the "Good Thought" Remedy

(By the Common People)

I HAVE been trying the "good thought" system, but up to date I have that worried look.

Maybe I don't do it right, though I've followed the advice of some of the best exponents of the doctrine.

President Bancroft of the Elevated railroad, for instance, tells me to think hard that his company is giving me the best service possible and I'll be all right when I'm on the platform waiting for the train.

But when I get to the theatre and get stuck in the middle of the subway going and coming and am late for the performance, I still have getting home. I have to sit up all the rest of the night working the "good thought" overtime to convince myself I'm getting my rights.

And the Elevated says if I keep my children off the streets they won't get run over by the cars. It points out that this suggestion is kindly made in order to save the lives or the limbs of the children and the damages frequently awarded against the company. I don't believe it mentioned the latter; I thought of them myself.

It sounds good. But I don't know what to do with those youngsters. They're here because they're here, and it's hard to keep them from breaking into the streets now and then, and going to cost me a lot of good thinking to get this matter right.

Mr. Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad has delivered me a series of lectures on this "good thought" idea. Mr. Mellen's method is very simple.

He says I have too much on my mind. I ought to let him take charge of everything in sight. Then he can charge anything he likes and all I'll have to do is to pay and look cheerful.

Maybe he's right. If it turns out that way I'll get Mr. Opper to make a new picture of me.

There are a good many other things I'd like to speak about in this piece, but I'm afraid there won't be space enough.

Mr. Richards of the Gas company says I ought to convince myself I'm getting cheaper and better gas than ever before, but if there was a meter on my "good thought" works it makes me tired to even guess at the outyards it would register when I [illegible] that proposition.

Then my wife sent a box of candy as a Christmas present to a friend in Denver. She wanted it sent by "express" because she had an idea that would be safer and quicker than the mail. The express companies have frequently assured us they are much more reliable than the government. I paid a dollar for the expressage and the candy was started on December 18. I mailed a letter to the same address the day the candy was sent and it arrived in four days.

Yesterday I got word that the candy was delivered on January 28.

And now I look more worried than ever.

FORT SNOW

By James J. Montague

WHERE underneath the Maytime skies the plumy lilacs blow.
Now frowning down on us as they've stood for Fort Snow.
We hear the stirring bugle call, and all a-thrill we see
Triumphant on the towering wall the banner of the free.
And as the echo on the hill fades drowsily away,
We give three cheers for Captain Bill, the hero of the day.

ALONE, unmoulded and serene, throughout the fierce attack,
His trusty claymore flashing keen, he beat the redskins back;
Unmoved by wild and hideous yell, he smote the fearful foe,
Until the last armed savage fell, all quiet on the snow.
Then, gazing on the beaten horde that lay so still the while,
He grimly sheathed his red-stained sword and smiled a slow, grim smile.

BUT, look! With roll of martial drum across the plain below
The sentried-and-walled allies come! Now strike the gong for Fort Snow!
The charge is swift; the cannon crash; loud rattles steel on steel.
As on the walls the sabres flash and routed foemen reel;
But now the sun, descending low adown the crimson West,
Lights still another vanquished foe—all silent, like the rest.

AND on the wall, with gory hands, but grimly smiling still,
Once more a conqueror, there stands the gallant Captain Bill!
Ah! brave young heart, when he is by, so well to watch and guard.
Well may the hostile armies fly that dare attack the yard.
And if some day still greater foe, dare gather in the land,
We calmly trust in all Fort Snows that Captain Bills command.
